

LIVE VIOLENCE FREE

Dear Friends,

This past year has been one of focus and forward movement for Live Violence Free. We continued the deep work of aligning our programs, resources, and partnerships around our core mission—supporting survivors of domestic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse with compassion and purpose.

Throughout the year, we strengthened our advocacy, expanded prevention and education efforts, and deepened collaborations with local agencies and city leaders to better address the intersection of housing, safety, and survivor support. By refining our services and data tracking, we ensured that each effort—whether crisis response, therapy, youth engagement, or community education—contributed to real, measurable impact for survivors and families.

Our dedicated staff and volunteers showed unwavering commitment amid a changing funding landscape and community needs. Together, we secured vital grants, launched new initiatives to strengthen survivor pathways to stability, and continued to build systems that support long-term healing and independence.

As we look ahead, Live Violence Free remains grounded in our mission and guided by a vision of a community where every person has access to safety, justice, and the opportunity to thrive.

In community,

Sandra Santane, President

Chelcee Thomas, Executive Director
